MURDER IN THE AIR

THE shots that tore into the shoulder Brigadier General Kussem could have been fired at the orders of Cairo or the Communists. Certainly they do not look like the work of a lone crank. But the mind boggles at the bloodbath that would have enguifed Iraq had the assassin succeeded in eliminating the one man in this seething, tempestuous and violent land who stands for national independence. Not one of his cohorts auggest themselves as trustworthy successors. Bereft of their monarchy the focal point of national nliegiance. Only Kassem realises this, it seems, but he is a poor substitute for Feisal. And once Kassem goes, civil war is inevitable. Maybe worse.

ASSEM'S prestige has never been high. An instigator of regicide, he has been guilty of desecration in the eyes of many Iraqis. Yet as a revolutionary has both lacked the personal dynamism and popular following of his people to succeed. Politically independent, his chief! role has been to play off contending factions without with either. Politically weak, he has preferred compromise and retreat to asserting authority. Rightly so, perhaps. The reaction to last month's executions showed how shaky was his authority. His stars have never been in the ascendant. The knowledge that his adversaries now feel strong enough to precipitate his downfall may chasten and subdue this reluctant hero of the revolution. The Iraqi Premier can reflect that he has been only a little luckler than Bandaranaike, Gandhi, Linquat Ali Khan and Feisal. But time is running out. Murder is in the air. Personalities

Sir Winston Churchiil led s parade of top political personalities back into Parliament today.

Only one member of the Conservative Government was defeated, and he had a minor job. That was Sir Isn Horobin, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Power, who was defeated in the "cotton belt" area of northern England, Sir Oswald Mosley failed in his bld for election.

The first negro ever to run for the House also was defeated. One of the most colourful personalities to be elected was Britain's greatest postwar neval hero, Commander J. S. Kearns. It was Kearns who in 1949 brought the British frigato Amethyst down the Yangtee River through the devastating fire of Chinese shore batteries, A film, "Yangieo Incident," was made of the exploit.

Chataway In For Sir Winston Churchill it was his 15th election victory. He has run for Parliament 19 times, and has been defeated four times. He has been elected nine successive times since 1924. Sir Oswald tried to get elected on a programme of white supremacy in the raciallytense Notting Hill district of .London. He polled 2,821 votes out of some 30,000 cast. Labour's Dr D. T. Pitti, the first negro ever to run in a British election, was defeated in London's Hampstead district. Olympic runner and television personality Mr Chris Chataway, won his first election try at Lewisham North with a 4,613 Conservative majority. School children are also learning more about Malaya and are being taught to have a completely Malayan outlook, immuned to communal sentiments.

The government has hit out at the English-educated elite. who they claim have been "devitalised, almost emasculated as a result of deculturisation." They hope to make Malay the medium of Instruction in institutions of learning, the language of the administration and judiciary. Now, talks between Singapore and the Federation on fiscal, industrial and trade policies are to be held here. These talks will also cover other pan-Malayan subjects such as immigration, posts, telecommunications and income tax.

The trade talks will aim at securing an integrated common market policy and a pan-Malayan industrial development programme in which there will be no duplication or overlapping. All these things are being done to facilitate a merger in the future. The Federation can do without Singapore as its world port. It would be an inconvenience in the beginning for the .Federation but after Port Swettenham had been fully developed on the west coast of the Malayan peninsula, Singapore would be non-essential.

state of the Federation. In Malaya, according to the last census, the Malays outnumber the Chinese in the proportion of 3.1 to 2.3 million. There are an estimated one million Chinese against 150,000 Malays in Singapore today.

Racial

A union of the two states would swell the number of Chinese to 3.3 million against 3.2 million Malays.

The Malays' fear of being swamped in the land of their birth by other races, especially the Chinese, has always been strong. It is for this reason that the Alliance government here has adopted Islam and Malay as the national religion and language of the country with special privileges made to safeguard

Malay rights and interests. Singapore's eagerness to merge with the Federation also stems from economic grounds. Trade is Singapore's lifeblood; and much of the new state's prosperity lies in the role it plays as the "clearing house" for both the Federation's export and import

There is considerable feeling here that a .merger between Malaya and Singapore is inevitable because both territories have too much in common, and the division itself is only manmade. But even then with the emergence of the PAP in Singapore, the Federation has decided to adopt a "wait and see"

Malraux, the rebel, gets an appeal he ignore cannot POIGNANT personal drama faces famous 58-year-old French novelist, Andre Malraux, who is Minister for Culture in the present government and, in addition, General de Gaulle's closest intellectual companion.

It is a case which would merit an excellent theme r for a play by Malraux's redoubtable political foe, Jean Paul Sartre.

The theme of the play would be the case of a novelist whose work continues to make converts to Communism long after he had ceased to be one himself, and had become a fiery nationalist instead.

to become a spokesman for his country," all his work and all his life as a man of action in China, in the Spanish Civil War, and in the French resistance, seems to contradict it.

'Responsible'

The other week Malraux was confronted with the force of the contradiction.

A life-long friend of his, and one of France's most eminent painters, has told him that his son, awaiting his call up, would rather desert than serve in the army in Algeria.

Anguished by the consequences of such an action, the father appealed to Malraux for help in ensuring that his son would not be asked to serve in family.

And in appealing to Malraux he could not help telling him: "You have some responsibility in this matter. Your writings have shaped this boy's thinking." To his great credit Malraux has responded to the appeal with warm generosity. For a man of such sharp intellect. WHERE EVERY CHILD WILL GO TO BOARDING SCHOOL

by CHRISTOPHER DOBSON

THE ONLY RESIDENT RE-PORTER OF A BRITISH NEWSPAPER IN MOSCOW

Moscow. FLOODLIGHTS light up a new, five-storey building at the end of the road in which I live in Moscow, and the clangour of train and bulldozer goes on far into the night as workmen rush to finish it.

· For this is a priority project: one of Russia's new boarding schools. Khrushchev set the pace in a speech last May: "The time is not far distant," he said, "when all parents agree, be schools."

This project is dear to Communism; it leaves both parents free to work and it gives the authorities ever-increasing opportunities to train the children to be good little Communists. Ordinary schools are being converted into boarding schools. with classrooms rebuilt as dormitories. They are open to any pupil.

Politics . . .

And there are buildings like the prefabricated five-storey school at the end of my road going up all over the Soviet

The Russians estimate that by the end of 1965 about 2.500,000 Russian children will be living in boarding schools.
What are these schools like? Well, to an Englishman they seem to be a mixture of school. technical college, holiday camp, and political centre, spiced with some of the more pagan aspects of English public school life.

Fees are graded according to the parents' income and range from 30 to 300 roubles (£1 to £10) a month; the State provides the rest, and it has been estimated that the cost of keeping a child at a boarding school is about 800 roubles a month. (The average wage for the whole of Russia is 800 to 900 roubles a month. Realistic conversion; 28 roubles for £1.)

Discipline . . .

As in all Soviet schools political education occupies an important place in the syllabus. And, far removed from the old days, the children taught ballroom dancing. portment, table manners, and the finer points of etiquette. Some of the schools have their own printing presses and furniture-making shops. The work they produce is sold and the money is turned over to the schools.

It is an achievement probably unparalleled in First Division football—but it has reacted upon Ted. He is embarrassed by youthful riches, but has no "old general" to marshal the potential re-

For instance, among the 19 forwards on the official Chelsea list only Frank Blunstone and Charles Lievesey have known any other clubs. Anyhow, International Blunstone knew only lowly Crewe and Lievescy is a Londoner who strayed Southampton and cost five figures to get back. What is more, 12 of the Chelsea boys are East Londoners, obtained for Chelsea by that persistent scout Jimmy Thompson much to the disgust of clubs like West Ham United.

Salad Days

Forty-seven-year old Ted Drake is a Hampshire Hog. who played cricket for his county and followed me into the Hampshire football side when he was with Basingstoke before signing professional for Southampton.
Drake's salad days were with Arsenal, of course, and he served his manager's apprentice-ship with Reading. Now he has to tackle Chelsea's penchant for inconsistency, and he will do it with the same broad-shouldered enthusiasm with which he used to lead the Highbury and Eng-land forward lines. The burly courage which once brought him seven goals in a match against Aston Villa, "Seven shots, seven goals" he always says.

Of course, the gem of Mr Drake's Chelsea collection is Jimmy Greaves, who, with his wing partner and pal, Peter Brabrook, are already English Internationals.

Without A Leader

But Greaves, unlike the deepball-playing Johnny Haynes down the road at Fultham, is a goal-poacher. He will become a schemer when he blossoms to full maturity, but meanwhile, the zestful Chelsea forward line is without a leader. Only the other day Mr Drake told me: "I badly need someone to hold that line together, but can you get him? I need almost as badly a lett-back and a wing-half."

For left-back, I know he would like Ray Taylor (Hudderefield) or Tony Allen (Stoke), while the ideal wing-half in his mind is Scottish International Bobby Evans (Celtic). Redheaded Evans would then complete a "hat trick" of Scottish International skippers in London; Docherty (Arsenal) and Mackay (Spurs) are the others.
Chelsea is not such a wealthy club as Spurs, but there is sufficient money to buy a top class player. The trouble is

IRELAND FACE SOCCER CRISIS

They May Keep The Sunday Rule And Quit World Cup

By ROY PESKETT

Football in Northern Ireland, which was swept to a pinnacle of interest by the great win over Italy last year and success in the World Cup, is facing a crisis.

Plans to rebuild the side after their 4—0 defeat by Scotland last Saturday wait upon a vital decision which the Irish F.A. Council must take later this month.

It is whether to enter the 1962 World Cup competition.

Deadline for the entry is December 15-and the chances are only 50-50 that Ireland will compete.

latively neglected. The government crop report had no apparent market influence. The indicated Oct. 1 estimate for 14,692,000 bales was in line with general expectations. The crop reporting report board said an increase of 14,000 bules over the previous report was due to the two to three weeks of generally favourable weather in mid-September which more than offset adverse weather in the first and last weeks of the period.

Mill and merchant buying in December and March contracts pointed up the increasingly fav- Monday: ourable news from the textile market. Some mills, with about 90 per cent of their first quarter production booked ahead, were resorting to the allocation, of goods to regular customers. This would be the first time that has happened since the shortages experienced in the post World Wor II era.

'Open October contracts today totalled 49,700 bales. Certificated stock rose to 2,032 bales, up 479 from the previous report. Trading in October will end in Wednesday: The market exthe noon hour on October 14.

Election Boom On London Stock Market

Closes At New High

London, Oct. 8. The London Stock Exchange held the liveliest session in its history today, in the apparent expectation that the Tories would win today's elections,

As 35 million voters went to the upils to elect 630 members of parliament, the Stock Ex-" ange registered a record total of 22,101 transactions, or 822 more transactions than on June 2, when the previous record was set.

The boom was not as marked just before the elections started, because some investors were tempted at the last minute to sell out at a profit. But this bld was easily absorbed and all sections of the industrial market shared in the boom including steels which, despite the threat of renationalisation, in case of a Labour victory, closed at a new high.

trial ordinary share index thus actions: reported a new record: 268.6, a rise of 1.7 points for the day today, above the 4.1 points rise HK Bank . Yesterday.

The activity in the Stack Exchange on the other hand was almost alarming. Some experts described as "irresponsible" the activities of thousands of small investors who were mainly responsible for the boom of the | K last few days.

Banking on a Tory victory, i some stockholders and speculators, including a great number | provident from the provinces, decided to risk everything they had. But the demand was not limited to these buyers, for large firms of Talkoo ... insurance agencles, pensions funds and others also joined in the movement of the small in- HK Hotel . vestors although more cautious. ly.—AFP.

Singapore, Oct. 8. The Government has decided to tighten rules regarding the issue of advance clearances to ships calling here, Mr R. L. Richard, the Master Attendant. said.

In a circular to shipping this policy was needed "owing to occurrences of misuse of advance clearance facilities. From now, on advance cerfificates, would only be issued to ships which had the appropriate and valid loadling. safety and radio certificates. and had completed loading all cargo, bunkers, stores and water. If a shipowner were to commit two breaches of these requirements, he said, advance port clearance facilities might be withdrawn from all vessels under his ownership.—China Mail Special.

two-storey building, to be known as the Fan Ling Magistracy, is to be constructed by Government at the Fan Ling roundabout. Designed by the Hongdong firm of architects, Palmer and Turner, the new building will provide accommodation for two magistrates - courts and juvenile court. The magistrates courts will occupy the first floor while the juvenile court will be located on the ground floor.

The whole building will be air-conditioned and there will be a private entrance for mogistrates. -A four-storey building, containing 30 flats for married Government servants, will be crected on the same site for the accommodation of staff members of the Judiciary, the Police and the Commerce and Industry Department. Piling work on both the magistracy and the quarters will begin next month and actual construction work will start towards the end of the year. The whole project is expected to be completed in twelve months. Tenders for the construction work are called for in today's Government Gazette.
